

Students Lead the Movement to End School-Related Gun Violence

In the weeks following the tragic shooting in Parkland, Florida, students across the nation have led a movement of Americans standing up and stepping out to call for a solution to school-related gun violence.

With a National School Walkout on March 14 and the March For Our Lives this past Saturday, March 24, students are using their voices to drive action to curb gun violence and to remind everyone that in a few short years, these voices will transform into votes.

All4Ed supports these students and all Americans fighting for common-sense measures to keep our schools and communities safe.

Education Highlights from Omnibus Spending Bill

Last week, President Trump signed a $1.3 trillion spending bill that will fund the federal government until September 30. This omnibus spending bill, officially named the Consolidated Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2018, provided nearly $70.9 billion for the U.S. Department of Education (ED), an increase of $3.9 billion over the fiscal year 2017 funding level. In this blog post, we highlight how educators can use money from the spending bill to promote school safety, the effective use of technology, personalized learning, deeper learning, and the science of adolescent learning.
