Now more than ever the nation’s education system is faced with high demands to prepare students for an information-rich, high-tech, entrepreneurial, global economy that requires a highly-skilled, knowledgeable, flexible, and capable workforce. To meet such demands, district and school leaders must build their leadership capacity as they rethink approaches and adopt innovative practices in curriculum, instruction, assessment, and professional learning to ensure more students take advantage of rigorous academic coursework and follow interest-driven personalized routes to success.

The Imperative
Students need more than a traditional high school diploma to succeed in today's workforce. Current systems are inadequate to address the ever-growing postsecondary aspirations for students whether it be college, a certification, a career, or another pathway to success. Therefore, K-12 public school system leaders need to redefine their goals for students to ensure America’s economic and global success.

In the rapidly changing world, All4Ed believes there is a critical need to create a culture of innovation in America’s schools and districts. Specifically, All4Ed’s Future Ready Schools (FRS) initiative helps districts create policies, procedures, and practices that empower district and school leaders to create and provide personalized, student-centered learning experiences. Most agree that the current systems are inadequate to address the ever-growing needs of students, parents, and teachers; schools must be modernized to ensure America’s future success.
